

Little Red Riding Hood: Radio Drama

Little Red Riding Hood Radio Drama 2nd Grade, Vicki Almon, Teacher

In this Radio Drama of Little Red Riding Hood, the second graders came away with some remarkable cross curricular learning experiences. The medium of radio drama gave the children the opportunity to develop listening comprehension skills as well as create sound effects to create setting and mood. They learned that a setting could be described using more than words and images. Through the use of drama, the children brought the story of Little Red Riding Hood to life, deepening their understanding of the plot and the characters. The children also developed their literacy skills of fluency and comprehension which they were able to transfer to everyday classroom reading.

The students wrote and performed the script. They also used found objects to create sound effects.
